MEMORANDUM FOR SEE DISTRIBUTION

SUBJECT: Modern Defense Civilian Personnel Data System Marketing
Brochure

The Department of Defense has completed initial development of the Modern Defense Civilian Personnel Data System (DCPDS). The modern system uses new technology to simplify the processing of personnel actions, accessing civilian work force information, and standardizing the management of civilian personnel services. The Department of the Army is poised to commence an aggressive schedule for deploying the modern DCPDS. We are currently scheduled to begin deployment in August 2000 and end in February 2001.

Effective communication is extremely important and we want to ensure that our work force is educated and informed. Enclosed you will find copies of the Army's brochure (Enclosure 2) for marketing the modern system. It was developed for your use in communicating with various audiences during meetings, training, and special events. We are providing copies of the brochure for distribution to a sampling of your serviced work force and human resources professionals. (Enclosure 1 outlines the distribution plan.) Please ensure this brochure is widely disseminated.

As a reminder, there are a variety of articles, information (including an electronic version of this pamphlet), and briefings posted on the Civilian Personnel On-Line web site at <http://www.cpol.army.mil/modern>. I recommend that you visit this site frequently, as my Regionalization Project Management Office staff continuously updates the information.

I appreciate your continued support of the modernization initiative. I believe that the end result will be an improved, streamlined, and more responsive system for managing our work force.

David L. Snyder
Deputy Assistant Secretary
(Civilian Personnel Policy)
